Just one of the things that makes Escapees magazine the most thoroughly read publication in the RV industry is because it is jam-packed with informative articles. One example is the column by Mark Nemeth, Escapees Magazine Technical Advisor and RVers' Boot Camp Instructor.

In each issue of Escapees magazine, Mark researches and answers questions from RVers about general and technical concerns involving the RV lifestyle. For example, Tom Smith asks:

"I'm curious as to the average life expectancy of things like refrigerators, water pumps, power converters, water heater controls, etc. I realize the number of days you use an appliance will shorten the lifespan and that I could have a unit that lasts longer than the norm, but I'm looking for you to help set that norm by days camping. I expect to have my 2002 Tahoe DT 19 in the field about 35 days this year, with 40 percent of the time in dry-camps (more use of the water pump, etc). Could you give me a general idea of life spans of modern RV systems?"

Look for Mark's response in the November/December 2008 issue of Escapees magazine!
